

Photojournalist Steve McCurry discusses his work and travels on WSRE's "Conversations with Jeff Weeks"

Pensacola, FL, September 30, 2014—Those who missed seeing Steve McCurry during his August visit to Pensacola will have another opportunity to watch an in-depth interview with the iconic photojournalist on WSRE's "Conversations with Jeff Weeks" airing at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, October 2.

McCurry has photographed many international conflicts, and he is renowned for his breathtaking views of Tibet and images shot on six continents during his celebrated career.

On August 27, McCurry discussed his work and travels at the Saenger Theatre during an event to help fund expansion of the Anna Lamar Switzer Center for Visual Arts at Pensacola State College. A collection of his work entitled "The Importance of Elsewhere," which features the famous "Afghan Girl" portrait from a 1985 cover of National Geographic, remains at the Switzer Center and will be on exhibit through December 12.

Encore presentations of the McCurry interview will be broadcast at 12:30 a.m. Friday, October 3 and 11 a.m. Sunday, October 5 on WSRE. Visit wsre.org for channel and program information.
